ABOUT THE COLLEGE:

Sagar Mahavidyalaya is a co-education college at Sagar Island in West Bengal, affiliated to the University of Calcutta and was established in the year 1998. The college has undergraduate programs in BA (Honours), BA (General) and B.Sc (General).

Since the establishment of the Institution, it has been working on reshaping the future of 35,000 families of Sagar Island one of the largest deltas in the world. The Island while witnessing climatic changes and natural disasters, has also witnessed many important events in Indian history. The establishment of the college has given opportunities in Higher Education to thousands of students in the Island who otherwise find it difficult to commute to or live in distant places for Higher Education purpose.

WEBINAR: “TEACHING LEARNING & EVALUATION DURING AND AFTER PANDEMIC PERIOD”

What has traditionally been attributed to the meaning and practices of the education process is in a standstill now. This standstill, while in the national scenario can be attributed to COVID-19 and the corresponding disruption of everyday life, has a double meaning for Sagar Mahavidyalaya and colleges like us which are also facing the brunt of extreme climatic events like floods and cyclones. Thus while the pandemic is an exception for a large number of colleges, institutions like Sagar Mahavidyalaya also have to brace for similar disruptions which are going to be the normal mode of operation considering the climate change and corresponding challenges to higher education practices in the present and future.

Thus while COVID-19 has disrupted the normal academic calendar and how institutions functioned in India and West Bengal, it is also an opportunity to rethink the teaching, learning and evaluation practices that institutions have been following before and during the pandemic. While the challenges to the academic calendar have been unprecedented, the situation also offers possibility to think through these challenges and work towards innovative solutions to address the current and future challenges that the teaching learning community are and will be facing. Towards the same the Department of Education, Sagar Mahavidyalaya invites Prof. Dulal Mukhopadhyaya, Prof. (Dr.) Kaberi Saha, Prof. (Dr.) Abhijit Kumar Pal, Dr. Amulya Kumar Acharya and others.

Target Groups: Teachers, Professors, Academicians, Educational Practitioners, NGOs, IT Sectors, Health Experts and people serving in multidisciplinary branches are cordially invited.

Pandemic, Climate Change and Literature

While literature always tries to situate climate crisis in the dystopian future, the recent pandemic alarmingly raises our concerns about the horrific environmental issues. The situation we are in right now is proving to be a reflection of the already existing Eco-Literature and pandemic literature. The purpose of this webinar is to address the issues of the horrors of pandemic and climate change together and to rethink the impact of climate crisis in this disturbed times.

ABOUT THE COLLEGE:

Sagar Mahavidyalaya, the only Government-aided General Degree College of Sagar Island, was established on 12th September, 1998. This co-educational college is affiliated to the University of Calcutta. Along with B.A. and B.Sc General Degree courses, the institution offers Honours Degree courses in seven subjects of Social Science and Humanities. The faculty members of each department sincerely serve the needs of their students. The management ensures healthy and excellent teaching-learning environment for almost 1800 students belonging to different sections of the society.

ABOUT THE WEBINAR:

Since time immemorial, the epidemic that was the outbreaks of infectious diseases and devastation of societies have had profound and lasting effects on mankind. Understanding this interesting topic, we must turn our attention towards the long past i. e. the Athenian Plague of 430 B. C. during Peloponnesian War fought between city-states of Athens and Sparta. Since then our earth has been witnessing succession of epidemics including Black Death of 14th century. All these have forcefully shaped our society and culture. Epidemic outbreaks have defined some of the basic tenets of modern medicines, pushing the scientific society to develop Principles of Epidemiology, prevention, immunization and antimicrobial treatments. Yet in this 21st century our life turns upside down due to Covid-19 pandemic situation. Through our discussion, we should aware of this dangerous situation and will achieve future protection.

Target Groups: Teachers, Professors, Academicians, Educational Practitioners, NGOs, IT Sectors, Health Experts and people serving in multidisciplinary branches are cordially invited.

Imparting and integrated understanding of economy, society, politics, ecology and environment holistically is the department's mission.

About the Workshop:

Research Methodology, Field Survey and Surveying remains the backbone and touch an important aspect of Geography and Science field. It is incomplete without a Survey research has statistically provided large production of landform structure based on data. The primary purpose of this type of survey research was to obtain information of describing characteristics of a large sample of individuals of interest relatively quickly. Field research is a method of collecting qualitative and quantitative data with the aim to understand, observe and interact with people in their natural settings, as well as goals of respondents to gain information and insight into various topics of interest with the help of using different surveying techniques. The focal theme is interdisciplinary and also of contemporary relevance. It needs to be discussed in different sessions that the outcome of the theoretical and field observation workshop becomes academically thought-provoking and fruitful to meet societal expectations.
